EATING THAI FOOD

Thai food is served in the oriental manner with several dishes being placed in the centre of the table and shared by all the people eating. Thais eat with a spoon and fork from a flat plate. They pile the plate with rice or noodles and sample other dishes in turn, a single spoonful being taken at a time. Dishes are never mixed on a plate because each has a distinctive flavour and mixing them tends to ruin them.

Customers should note that some Thai dishes can be very hot and spicy and you should feel free to ask us to adjust our seasoning to suit you. All of our food is freshly cooked to order. Cooking to order may sometimes lead to an unavoidable delay in serving your meal, especially when the restaurant is busy. Your patience is appreciated.
